The Servant of God

Today's First Reading for the Mass is about the servant of God. The prophet Isaiah says that the servant of God is a light to the nations. His mission is not limited to bringing blessings to his own people. God's faithful servant brings a salvation that reaches to the ends of the earth. The prophet wishes to emphasize the universal scope of the servant's mission.

The First Reading always prepares us for the Gospel. Today we see John the Baptist pointing toward Jesus and saying, "Behold, there is the Lamb of God who takes away the sins of the world." Not only the sins of His followers. Not only the sins of Israel. But the sins of the whole world! He came to forgive the sins of the Greeks and Romans and Egyptians and everyone that you can think of. The scope of His salvation is universal. Jesus came down from heaven to forgive everyone. This is not to say that everyone is saved. We have to respond to His gift of salvation with faith in order to make it effective.

Our prayer today has two parts to it. We praise the Lord for giving the gift of salvation to us and to everyone. And we petition the Lord to help us to respond to His gift of salvation with faith so that it can be effective in our lives.

Shroud of Turin: What Can We Determine from Scientific Analysis? Among the few artifacts in the world, the Shroud of Turin has stirred the imagination, sparked controversy, raised speculations, and strengthened the faith of some. For nearly four centuries, the Shroud has resided in the Cathedral of St. John the Baptist in Turin, Italy. Millions of Christians perhaps consider it to be the burial shroud of Jesus of Nazareth. Controversy has surrounded the shroud from its initial discovery. The history and controversy will be discussed in this presentation along with the various interpretations of the image on the shroud including the evolving use of scientific methods to validate and or further challenge the legitimacy of the shroud and its proposed image of the crucified Christ.

Jan. 20, presentation from 9am -1pm, Emmaus Hall, Saint John's University, Collegeville. Synchronous Event. Free event. Registration is required: www.collegevilleMN.com/theologyday, 320-363-3560 or theologyday@csbsju.edu.
